

Ashok G P

Ashok G P is a Multi-Instrumentalist, Composer, Arranger, Choir Director, Vocal Coach, and Author. A 2014 graduate in Music Education from The Bangalore Conservatory, and is an advocate of formal music education, pressing on the importance and the benefits of the same, his journey in music education has been one that leans towards aesthetics and quality of music education in his sphere of tutelage and pedagogy.

Founder of Isai Kalvi Conservatorio di Musica, a music school catering to formal music education, and the rich heritage and legacy handed down over several hundred years. He has served as the Head of Department at the school and university levels. Successfully innovating and implementing curriculum backed by research and functionality in all positions he has been involved with, and simultaneously directing choirs of various sizes ranging from 40 to over 160 members. His students have won several competitions under his leadership. Notable performances would include students placing 3rd in the national level AIU (Association of Indian Universities) competition, as well as participation in several choral festivals at the school and university levels.

He has also contributed to the literary world of music, authoring a book on Western Music History titled "Music Through the Ages" a concise and brief account, covering all the eras of Western music, aiming to help the academic, the music lover, and the common man alike. He has published a paper titled "An Eclectic Perspective to Teaching Musical Improvisation" taking on the academically lesser touched upon area, and actively researching in the area of musical improvisation and harmony.

He actively works with students online internationally, preparing them with a strong and rigorous curriculum that enables them to take on examinations, performances, and musical enjoyment.

He is also a member of the International Society for Music Education, and continues to spread the message of love, joy, and harmony through music. He aims to further this movement to make a difference in the lives he encounters.